and thousands of returned missionaries of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who speak all of the major foreign languages and many of the lesser known ones such as Samoan, Finnish, Navajo, Korean, Chinese.

Currently there are over four hundred majors and a hundred others pursuing higher degrees in language at BYU, he added.

Dr. Blair pointed out the need in the foreseeable future for trained linguists. A linguist is a person trained in language science, not just a multilingual person.

"The U.S. Government has emphasized the need for qualified persons trained in linguistics," he said. "A large number of linguists are employed by the Department of State Foreign Service Agency, Peace Corps training centers, the Army Language Institute, and others."

He also said that many more linguists are employed by such organizations as the Center for Applied Linguistics, the English Language Services, Bell Telephone Laboratories and IBM Research Laboratories.

Opportunities for teaching and research on a university level are almost unlimited, he said, since linguistics is a part of the humanities, the social sciences and also the arts and sciences.

The new program will include such courses as descriptive phonology and morphology, linguistic structures, history of languages, phonetics, semantics, comparative linguistics, language learning, etc., Japanese, and Indian.

Dr. Blair said candidates must have high-level competence in one foreign language or intermediate-level competence in two foreign languages.

He reported that hundreds of linguistics studies are contracted each year outside of the area of merely teaching foreign languages.

Vienna Boys Choir To Perform Here

The twenty-third North American tour by Vienna Boys Choir will bring the world-famous youngsters to BYU.

The concert will be held in the Smith Fieldhouse Thursday at 8:15 p.m., under the sponsorship of the BYU-Community Concert Series.

The 22 boys, 8 to 14 years old, study at the Seminary School in Vienna in a former palace near the city's center. About one in ten of the boys who apply for admission to the school is accepted, and at least two years of study must be put in before a boy is judged ready to be a member of the performing choir.

The school maintains three choirs at all times. Two are available for touring while one must always be in Vienna to participate in services in the Hofmusikkapelle and the choir's other musical activities. It is the school's policy to rotate the youngsters so that each may participate in a choir tour. The complete choir numbers around 100, with two touring groups of 22.

In 1498, the Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I ordered the organization of a boy's choir to participate in the performance of religious music at the Court Chapel in Vienna. The organization, now known as the Vienna Choir Boys, is one of the oldest musical organizations in the world.

When a boy's voice changes, his service with the choir is over. But he isn't just a "has-been" at the age of 13 or so. The organization maintains another home in Vienna and cares for the boys, seeing them through their education.

Many become professional musicians like their distinguished former colleagues in the choir—Schubert, Haydn, Beethoven, Mozart, Liszt and a host of others.

Winter

Carnival

Slated

By Michele Barnes
University Staff Writer

The Lettermen's song, "Our Winter Love," is the theme of the Winter Y-Land Dance which will follow the Lettermen Concert Feb. 10.

The Carl Williams Quintet will provide the music. Featured with the band will be Sandy Jensen who has recently signed a recording contract with Capitol Records.

Attendance at the dance will be limited to 1600 couples. This is to insure those who do attend have an enjoyable evening in a more relaxed atmosphere. Previously more than 1500 couples have been admitted to the Ballroom. The dance is semi-formal and will cost $1.50 per couple.

Providing intermission entertainment will be the Anderson Sisters of Provo. The sextet of lovely girls will perform on the Andy Williams Show this spring.

One of the newest events of Winter Carnival are the Winter Y-Land Follies. This event has been veiled in a cloak of mystery. According to Wendy Johnson, Follies chairman, those attending should "expect the unexpected. Prepare to see your friends in a new light," she continued.

The first official presentation of the Winter Carnival Royalty will take place at the follies.

The follies are destined to become one of the major events of Winter Carnival in years to come. It is hoped that this year will go a long way toward establishing tradition. Creativity and originality have been spent toward making this event successful.

The follies will begin promptly at 7 p.m. in the Wilkinson Center Ballroom Thursday Feb. 9. There will be no charge.

Tickets for all Winter Carnival events will go on sale Monday. Entries for individual events are due tonight at 9 p.m. in 119 Wilkinson Center.

Director of the BYU dancers is Mrs. Mary Bee Jensen.

The tour will also take the group to Hibbing, Minn., a mining area where many immigrant ethnic groups live, and the dancers will perform for them their own native dances. The sponsor for this concert will be Johnnie Cavelle, owner of the Johnnie Cavelle Dancing Studios in Minnesota.

There will be about four concerts altogether during the four-day tour. Concerts in Duluth and Minneapolis are tentative.

The group of 30 dancers expects to be back in Provo by Sunday, Feb. 19.

Registration Done, Classes Now

It was a nice break—but most BYU students feel some sort of relief at getting back to classes.

Although somewhat exhausted from our own semester break activities, we managed to struggle through the registration process like everybody else and are looking forward to getting back into classes and attempting to repair our damaged grade points.

Registration on the whole, went pretty smoothly this time around, and Bill Sampson and his staff are to be congratulated for the way they handled the difficult process.

Some suggestions have been forwarded about moving to the computer method, and studies are continuing on this registration process. The University of Utah tried full-computer registration last quarter but with mixed success. Crowds of irate students were lined up for class changes the day after registration when somebody goofed in feeding some data on students to the computers.

But with the student body the size of BYU, snags and bulky lines are going to continue to be a major problem. The bright spot in this registration was the full pre-registration program carried out by the colleges where the student was a major.

This was a big factor in cutting down the time and confusion in getting class cards in required classes for major requirements.

We hope those involved will continue to consider and implement new processes that will help to streamline registration.

Prehistoric Caves Discovered

Near Southern Utah County

A prehistoric cave near Goshen, southern Utah County, has been excavated under the direction of the Department of Archaeology and Anthropology.

James M. Mock, an archaeologist has been excavating the cave with Professor Ray Matheny helping to direct and classify the artifacts obtained from the cave's floor.

The dug has produced pottery, animal skins, basketry, and other implements which have made it possible to determine that there are at least four main periods of time represented.

BEGAN IN '80s

The type of material in the cave is of the present era which started in the late 1800's. It is distinguished by finds of square nails, old glass, which has been colored by age, and old shell casings. At the bottom of the modern layer there was evidence of wild sheep, deer and Shoshone Indian arrow points, basketry, pottery and other signs of human life.

The major occupation of the cave is called the Fremont Culture. It is distinguished because the people were primarily agriculturists, farming mainly corn, beans and squash. Evidences of wild sheep, deer and buffalo remains were found in this level, evidently brought in by the inhabitants.

Stones used for grinding and sometimes found along with the bone remains of numerous smaller animals, which the Indians must have eaten. Many arrow points and shafts gave the indication that the cave was used as a shelter by hunting parties.

A desert culture, which is non-agrarian, is directly below the Fremont level. This area is distinguished by flat grinding stones, carved bone and wood implements for punching holes or scraping the skins of animals.

OTHER CAVE

A cave in Wendorf, Utah, has implements and artifacts similar in type and design to the cave in Goshen and according to radioactive carbon dating, this period existed 7,000-9,000 years ago.

Carbon dating has not yet been applied to the Goshen Cave.

Two large holes were dug by vandals which disturbed some of the strata in the time periods.

The number of articles taken by the vandals is not known, but it is supposed that something was found which prodded the digging of the large holes. There is a federal law which carries a fine and a jail sentence for disturbing or removing materials that can be used for scientific use.

LDS Motion Picture Film Distribution Centers Named

Branch centers for the distribution of motion picture films by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints have been established throughout the United States and Canada.

The Church priesthood and auxiliary committees since 1954 have sponsored 65 films which were produced at BYU's Motion Picture Studio. Five motion pictures are currently in production at the Studio.

The seven film branch centers are located at Los Angeles; Desert Book Co., Salt Lake City; BYU; Idaho Falls; Mesa; Ariz.; Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada and the new film center established in New York in January 1967. These film centers will carry the most popular Church films.

to begin with. As the demand increases the distribution centers will stock all of the films produced by the Church.

The New York film distribution center will make it possible for the members of the Church in the eastern part of the United States to have access to the films.

Market Place

"Mormon Naturalism and the Dignity of Man" will be the topic discussed in the MARKETPLACE today by A. Burt Horsley. The MARKETPLACE, a monthly session in which interested students and professors discuss questions of philosophical import, will be held at 4:00 p.m. in the Joseph Smith Banquet Hall.

Girl-watching should be a great aesthetic. There is nothing more beautiful to watch than a woman.

Girl-watchers very seldom know how to act subject, however, as the art that it was meant

American men, for instance, make very watchers because they make such a sham out of a subtle-obvious show of appreciation.

Americans hide behind newspapers, books and other paraphernalia and then pretend they are the ravishing creatures who walk toward them. One drops his newspaper, stares at the girl's blouse, lowers his eyes to her ankles and returns to his buddies on the back, does a double "flip-turns to his newspaper to conjures up that we look of abandoned casualness.

THEY ENJOY IT

American men don't know that girls through being appreciated and that it's not fair to a girl to admire, not to let her know that she is attractive as it is appropriate and not something else.

American men are often refreshed on occasion when they let a girl know that they looked at her, because they fail to understand the from which she views the whole situation.

The basic axiom of effectiveness is simply that a man must look at a woman with "you" kind of glance and not an "I want you" kind.

NOT CREATURES

When the distinction is made by a man, between girls as female human beings and not as which have social value, that man has made of the art that it is and can be.

He becomes if I may use the word a connoisseur values a woman not for what she is himself, but rather he appreciates her as she is she fulfills her own destiny.

What woman isn't flattered by a gentleman's admiration and experienced taste? She enjoys his which is incorporated into a smile calculated both obvious approval and subtle appreciation.

TASTE DEVELOPED

The connoisseur has developed his sense of taste to the point where his approval is the entire aesthetic judgement.

The astute woman is well aware that she may appear to approve of her with the casual air, but she recognizes that what he thinks is out and very personal.

A connoisseur's judgement is often swift and shallow.

The connoisseur values his own sincerity, and taste much to highly to flippantly pass him. He has too much self-respect for his own ability to be insincere.

KNOWS CHARM

A connoisseur make a distinction between woman and the insensitive girl by watching to or not she has enough intelligence to give an intonation, thought, and concentration in reply to his as he did in complimenting her.

What the connoisseur asks in return for his evaluated judgement is simply that the effort he to appreciate a woman is in return appreciated man.

Rare Music In Con

by Camilla Miner,
Campus Events Editor

Some rarely-heard works along with popular compositions will be presented by Paul Pollei of the music faculty today in the Recital Hall at 8:15 p.m. Seats are not reserved.

Mr. Pollei, who completed his undergraduate work at the University of Utah and received his Masters degree from Eastern School of Music in Rochester, New York, is in his fourth year of teaching at BYU. He also studied at UCLA, USC, Stanford and Sherwood School of Music in Chicago.

LUDUS TONALIS
The first piece on the program is an important 20th Century composition, "Ludus Tonalis" by Hindemith. Written in 1943, the complete work includes twelve preludes and fug which will be to Mr. Pollei, the Century counterpart "Well-tempered Cl". The second son first, is rarely heard Variations in 33" written by Bedrich Smetana. It consists of var fugue.

Mr. Pollei, who clude a tour of Pgium, will play "sentimentals" composer, Ravel. The piece is a 20th C Chopin's often-beaten F minor, op. 52" to close the recital in AMS-Circle K Book Sale ...

Used Texts Moving Fast

"Excellent results" have been reported from the Wilkinson Center Games Area as the Associated Man Students-Circle K Used Book Sale continues with a flood of new offers.

"We've taken in about 2,000 books since we began and have sold nearly 75 per cent of the students' books," said Bryant Anderson, booksale co-chairman representing AMS.

John Asle is the other co-chairman representing Circle-K.

EXPERIMENTAL

"This program is on an experimental basis this year to give the students more complete and better ways to buy and sell their books," Anderson mentioned.

The sale, which will end Feb. 8 at 5 p.m., involves both text and non-text, according to Anderson.

When students put up used books for sale, they simply set their own price on a triplicate form and check back later to see if their book has been sold. If it has, the seller is paid his set amount, less 10 cents for handling costs.

ADVANTAGES

Anderson pointed out the value of BYU's first used booksale. "We feel that the sale will render a worthy service to the student body and faculty by providing several advantages:

- It is a non-profit project with student-donated time.

- Students and faculty do not incur overhead losses except for the 10 cents handling charge.

- It offers patrons an opportunity to sell discontinued books as well as non-texts.

- Sellers set their own price for each book they want to sell, according to condition of book, personal demand and personal judgement."

"Unsold books which are not picked up by 5 p.m., Feb. 8 deadline will be sold to the Bookstore or offered as charity," Anderson noted.

He also stressed, "Each patron will be personally responsible to see that he buys the correct text for his classroom needs."

A Used Booksale patron checks the price of a Biology text.

MODERN DANCE CLUB

Time of the Modern Dance Club meeting today has been changed from 5:30 to 6 p.m. Miss Renee Verg of the Women's P.E. Dept. will present a special lesson followed by election of officers.

Only a few piles of texts remain standing after a flurry of sales in the AMS-Circle K Used Booksale in the Wilkinson Center Games Area.

Moon Program Could Be Set Back For Months As Result Of Tragedy

Cape Kennedy (UPI)—In an ironic timing of events, technicians started dismantling America's fire-gutted Apollo moonship Wednesday just a day after President Johnson warned of a new Russian space spectacular in the "near future."

The President's report to Congress was written before Friday's tragedy, which claimed the lives of Astronauts Virgil Grissom, Edward White and Roger Chaffee. It hailed 1966 as America's best year yet in space.

Depending upon how quickly technicians pinpoint the cause of the Apollo fire, and how serious the problem is, America's man-to-the-moon program will be set back anywhere from four months to a year or more. The United States had hoped to put a man on the moon by 1969.

NEW SECTION

While the piece-by-piece dismantling of the moonship proceeded, a duplicate Apollo cabin section was being rushed by air from California.

A nine-member board of inquiry that is investigating the accident has drawn up a plan for disassembly of both spacecraft, but a decision has not been made to proceed past the dismantling of the launch escape tower and parachute deploying system on Apollo 1.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has not said what it plans to do and presumably is waiting until the board completes its investigation. It was apparent, however, that another manned flight attempt was at least four months away, and possibly much longer.

The Apollo 1 escape system,

All five Americans aboard were killed when Communist gunners shot down the C123, one of the three planes spreading defoliating chemicals along North Vietnamese infiltration routes either in or on the fringes of the Demilitarized Zone, separating North and South Vietnam. Another C123 took a single hit but made it back to base at Da Nang.

MISSING TARGET

The two fragmentation bombs dropped by a radar-guided U.S. Marine A6 Intruder jet were aimed at Viet Cong mortar positions 75 miles south of Da Nang, but landed instead amid a group of U.S. Marines. One Marine was killed and 11 others wounded, eight seriously enough to be hospitalized.

which was useless in Friday's flash fire, was the first major unit to be removed from the spacecraft.

EXCELLENT RECORD

In his report to Congress, President Johnson noted that, among other things, America had successfully launched 100 spacecraft during 1966, compared to 48 for the Russians.

But he added:

"In spite of the impressive record . . . there is no basis for complacency as the Soviet Union was far from idle."

"The vigorous nature of the Soviet program indicates that this hiatus could be attributed to the transition from one manned project to the next, and that new significant manned space flights will be witnessed in the near future."

There has been speculation that the next Russian effort will be to orbit a space station manned by as many as eight Cosmonauts.

Jet Plane Crash Claims Life Of Navy

El Centro, Calif. (UPI)—One of the Navy's famed Blue Angel precision flying team was killed Wednesday when his jet plane crashed into rugged terrain 16 miles northwest of the naval air facility here.

The facility, from which the Blue Angels were flying, refused to
